Dear Friends:

It is my pleasure that I write to you today in celebration of the CareOne Relief Fund awards ceremony. I thank you for the invitation to attend, but regret that I am unable to join you as I am in Washington, D.C. for votes.

Superstorm Sandy affected the lives of so many in the Highlands, Middletown and several other towns across New Jersey. In the wake of the storm, I have seen the good will and support by individuals, groups and organizations to help those in need. I commend the CareOne community for their efforts to help its employees, their families, and local residents who suffered losses from the storm. The funds dispersed today to individual families, Hope for Highlands and the Middletown Disaster Relief Fund will go a long way in the recovery process.

It is important that we work together on a federal, state and local level to rebuild New Jersey. I will continue to advocate on behalf of all those affected by Superstorm Sandy to ensure that they have the necessary resources to move forward.

Once again, please accept my sincere appreciation to CareOne for its commitment to its employees and the community. It is efforts such as this that demonstrate the remarkable fortitude and generosity of New Jersey.

Sincerely,

FRANK PALLONE, JR.
